TREATY IS CONSIDERED IN SENATE

FIRST DOCUMENT OF ITS KIND TO BE DISCUSSED IN FULL LIGHT.
JONES SPEAKS IN FAVOR OF LEAGUE
Lodge Makes No Statement In Presentation Of Terms.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, Sept. 15.—Consideration of the German peace treaty began this afternoon in the senate. It was called up by Chairman Lodge of the foreign relations committee and because the first great document of its kind to be discussed in the senate in the full light of publicity.

After having the treaty adopted a motion without objection, to proceed to consider the German peace treaty. Senator Lodge presented a copy of the treaty with Austria, which had been received from the Chicago Tribune and which President Wilson refused recently to transmit to the senate.

There was little formality in the beginning of the real senate contest over the treaty. Contrary to expectations, Senator Lodge made no preliminary statement and Senator Jones, democrat, of New Mexico, proceeded to deliver a prepared address on the league of nations. Little of the half of the senate membership was present.

Senator Jones in address "In-justice declarations poison the public mind" against the German peace treaty and the league of nations. Senator Jones, democrat, of New Mexico, speaking in the senate today said if the reservations recommended by the foreign relations committee and the league of nations would "fall."

"If we ever have a separate treaty with Germany," he declared, "it will be a negotiated and not a victorious treaty. The United States will not participate in restoring order out of the world's chaos."

"The unselfish, the ideal, the altruistic motives which have inspired the league are sufficient inducements for all the sacrifices and effort which will be called upon to make in carrying out its provisions."

Senator Jones said in his opinion reservations were unnecessary. Article ten, he continued, "is a declaration to the world that this country shall stand with the league and will be supported by the combined power of all the other members of the league."

"It should be thought advisable to safeguard the rights of congress as to article ten," he said, "it might easily be done by instructions to the committee and no reservation is necessary to that end."

Regarding the Monroe doctrine, the senator said its validity was recognized by the treaty while as to the necessity for the proposed reservation relating to the right to withdraw from the league, he declared, President Wilson's interpretation as given to the foreign relations committee at the recent White House conference was published throughout the world and not a suggestion against it has come from any source."

Calling attention to "unsavory conditions in Mexico which he said were 'daily growing more intolerable,'" Senator Jones declared no greater agency could be conceived for the purpose of bringing about peace in Mexico without war than the establishment of a league of nations.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, Sept. 15.—President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor today refused to make any comment on the report that the strike of steel workers set for September 22 had been postponed.

Keller, Aged Murderer of Mrs. Johanna Hische, is Dead in Waupun Prison
[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Louis Keller, aged 87, confessed slayer of Mrs. Johanna Hische, is dead at the state penitentiary at Waupun, where he has been serving a life sentence, according to information received from prison officials today by S. G. Dunwiddie, district attorney. Funds with which to pay burial expenses are being sought by prison officials, but an investigation by Mr. Dunwiddie reveals the fact that the deceased murderer left no money. There are no relatives who might be approached. His body will probably be buried in Potter's field.

The death of the aged man recalls one of the most sensational murder cases in Janesville's history. The tragedy occurred more than eight years ago, on the night of June 21, 1911, at the Hische home, 1414 South Third street. Keller paid $4 for a revolver and went to the home that night, hiding in the bushes to await the family's return. He fired two shots at Mr. Hische, missing him, and then opened fire on Mrs. Hische, killing her instantly. He was struck down. Hische's body escaped while help was being sought.

Posses were hastily organized and an all-night search led by Ex-Chief William Appleby followed. Keller was found at 9 o'clock the next morning by city scavengers. He was asleep in a boat off Goose Island, his revolver admitted to him, but said he fired in self-defense and only to scare them.

Several theories for the crime were advanced, the most tangible of which was that Keller was jealous of Mrs. Hische's criticisms of his paying attention to the 15-year old daughter. Previous to the shooting, Keller had said he intended to marry Hische, agreeing to take his pay in board for one year. He stayed at the Hische home two weeks and then returned a few weeks later to commit the crime.

Keller was found guilty of murder in the first degree.

MC CUMBER REPORTS ON PEACE PACT

ADVISES REJECTION OF AMENDMENTS AND MODIFICATION OF RESERVATIONS.
SENATOR TAKES STAND ALONE
Files Individual Minority View; Attacks Attitude Of Majority.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, Sept. 15.—Rejection of all proposed amendments to the German peace treaty and modification of the recommended "strong" reservations was urged in an individual minority report filed with the senate today by Senator McCumber, republican of North Dakota, next in rank on the foreign relations committee to Chairman Lodge.

McCumber did not join the recent republican majority report and voted with the democrats on amendments and several reservations. In attacking the majority report of Chairman Lodge, Senator McCumber denounced most of the majority amendments as "selfish, dishonest and dishonorable" and charged that they seek to "isolate the United States from the rest of the world and abandon our allies."

Scoring the committee reservations to article 10 of the league of nations covenant, Senator McCumber said they were "dishonest, self-serving and simple" and designed to take the United States entirely out of the league.

Opposes Shunting Change
Special opposition was expressed by Senator McCumber to the proposed amendment of the Shunting provision. By this amendment, he said, Japan would be "kicked" out of the league by the United States and Shantung possibly lost to China.

Calling attention to what he termed the failure of the committee majority to make the purpose of the league, Senator McCumber said: "Not one word is said, not a single allusion made concerning the purpose of the league or the methods by which those purposes are to be accomplished."

"Tromp and sarcasm have been substituted for argument. It is regrettable that the animosity which certain almost wholly against the league should have been directed against the United States, the world's welfare. It is regrettable that the consideration of a matter so foreign to partnership towards or subservience to the president."

Senator McCumber said that the amendment to give the United States a veto over the league with England and the British colonies was "unnecessary."

Says One Vote Is Enough
The plan of giving each member nation one vote without regard to size or importance was the only possible plan, the senator stated.

Senator McCumber said his only objection to the league reservation was that it was an amendment pure and simple. He said, "of the most important article in the league, its purpose is to take the United States out of the league entirely."

"Second, it places this country in a false and misleading position, an encouraging powerful countries to inflict or impose any wrong on weaker nations, by our declared policy of non-interference."

With his report Senator McCumber submitted the six reservations he champions as substitutes for the committee recommendations. These recently were made public.

JANESVILLE YOUNG PEOPLE TO KEEP ON WITH EDUCATION

Opening of another school year finds Janesville well represented at the leading universities, colleges, normals, and preparatory schools in the state. From a large number of students who will attend higher institutions this year it is evident that the educational movement is not only on the increase but that the enrollment in universities and colleges will be greater than usual this year because of the return to civilian life of students of young men whose educational courses were interrupted by the war.

Nearly 50 percent of the 1919 graduates of the local high school will enter higher institutions this month, a percentage much larger than in any previous year.

Value Thief Draws Six-Months' Sentence

James Collins was sentenced to six months in the county jail by Judge Maxfield in the municipal court this morning, when he was found guilty of stealing five steam valves from the Hanson Tractor company. Collins was taken into custody Friday morning with Mark Wythe, his traveling companion. Wythe was dismissed by Judge Maxfield when it was found that he was not with Collins at the time the theft was committed. Collins was arrested after he had visited the Snyder plumbing shop and offered to sell the valves for two dollars.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH MAKES EXTENSIVE PLANS FOR FUTURE

In common with many other organizations the members of the First Christian church are looking forward to enlarged opportunities, and are making extensive plans for the new church edifice which they contemplate building here in the near future. A substantial profit was realized on the recent sale of the lot on the corner of Milwaukee and Acadia streets, on which the temporary church was erected. Part of this fund was immediately invested in the Lowell corner on South Main street.

The board of trustees having charge of the deal is composed of J. H. Fisher, T. E. Sadler, Charles Sykes and C. K. Gillespie. A notice was read yesterday in church and will be read again next Sunday, empowering a committee to make the plans for the new church. The official at the head of the ministerial board of the Christian church, F. W. Burnham, was in the city last week conferring with the trustees. He is enthusiastic in regard to the situation in Janesville. The hope is to have a community center, a place for the children to play and a place for the men to meet, and a room for a reading room, and a room for a meeting place for the church. The church has been promised a financial backing both by local capital and by an extension fund of the church.

The temporary building at the corner of Milwaukee and Acadia streets, which they have occupied since the church was burned, is to be sold and removed immediately. Other quarters will be secured in which to hold church services, until a new church is erected. Negotiations are in progress for such a building, but nothing definite has as yet been done. The organization started some seven weeks ago, and has since been meeting at first in Caledonia hall, F. L. Van Boerhys was the state evangelist who had charge of the church. The first pastor, W. Cummings was the first pastor. This place was at first a mission point, the salary being partly paid by a local church and partly by the missionary forces of the church. The church organization includes nine deacons and three elders, and being a church of the M. E. Sadler and T. E. Sadler.

The Sunday school is in a promising condition, about 100 pupils being enrolled. The church is especially devoted to their organizations, the Women's Missionary society having a membership of 100 members. ## Voice of the People

To the Editor:—I saw in your "Voice of the People" Friday night a piece in regard to a matter of three, by "A Reader." By the way that party thinks a child has no rights at all in this world. If a little noise makes any one nervous I should certainly see a doctor or go to the country till my health was better. I suppose they believe in that foolish old saying, "That children should be seen and not heard." I wonder when the time ever was that children were ever such angels. Surely not in my time or theirs either.

Why should we take the pleasure and sunshine out of the little children's lives because they make noise? We should not try to make them have ten devils than one fool and I agree with him. Now if you buy a dog tag he can go any place and bark any time of the day and night and no one complains of that. Maybe if we bought such a tag for the children they might have the privilege of making noise. Nobody says if you have a dog when you want to rent a house but they ask if you have children and hold up their hands and say if you say you have children. What was it that Theo. Roosevelt used to say about race suicide? Surely it would not be a good world without children to fill up our hearts and homes. If the party "A Reader" would be kind enough to tell us how to make our world without children, we would be glad to know about it. We would be glad to know about it. We would be glad to know about it.

A Mother of Three.

To the Editor:—Not long since a city official, not a policeman, "dated" a girl. She laughed it off, but later he told her that he had "dated" her. She ignored all this and told no one. Months later this city official (who is a woman charmer) was at work with another woman. She was a woman to whom he had made indecent proposals. He was ill at ease, fearing his brother knew and might get out the word. He was ill at ease, fearing his brother knew and might get out the word. He was ill at ease, fearing his brother knew and might get out the word.

A woman called up my home and asked me to call on her. She was a woman to whom he had made indecent proposals. He was ill at ease, fearing his brother knew and might get out the word. He was ill at ease, fearing his brother knew and might get out the word. He was ill at ease, fearing his brother knew and might get out the word.

Brother weakened at the knees for it was his own home telephone. That noon he raised a scene with his sister for trying to attract the eye of the carpenter. Hot words were exchanged.

Had the brother been far seeing he would have discerned. Why did the carpenter (who holds a city office of trust) call up the number and ascertain what repair work there was for him to do? As a rule, when men who do job work are requested to call a number, do they call that number of go around and ask their work mates "Do you know who's number that is?" READER.

To the Editor:—I am one of those returned soldiers, whose cause you ever champion and use your columns to forward any good thing for the boys. I am one of the many who enjoy your privileged column "Voice of the People" as it shows where you stand on the issues of the day. We have read of late several times.

Reading "Lost and Found" ads in The Gazette will increase your faith in human integrity. Every day valuable are lost and found and Gazette Want ads bring loser and finder together.

The person who finds two twenty-dollar bills—as someone did the other day—does not glance at the bills and say, "Found," and stick 'em in his jeans. Instead, he phones a "Lost and Found" ad to The Gazette and the next day he has the money to the rightful owner.

Horse Sense Is Moran's Secret of Red's Rise

There is nothing intricate or complicated about Pat Moran's system, which have just about taken a strangle hold on the 1919 pennant in the National League. Moran says he just tried at all times to exercise horse sense, and above everything else always took care of the game at hand without even a thought for the morrow.

Probably Moran's system can best be explained by reciting some incidents in the recent series between the Cubs and Reds. In one game with the Reds a run or two to the fore, the Windy City crew began finding Plesner's benders. Instead of sending a weak hurrier to the bull pen to warm up, Moran sent King, one of his star boxmen to warm up and kept him there during the entire game. Moran never gave a thought to the matter of having to use King out of his turn.

On another occasion, in the same series, Salvo was being hit hard and although the Reds were a run to the good, Moran figured he might have need for another hurrier. King was again chased to the bull pen. Pat declared after the series that he believed in taking care of the game at hand. "We were in the lead in both cases," said the Reddie chief, "and perhaps the next day we would not have had a lead to work with. Figuring on tomorrow's game does not appeal to me, for tomorrow's game may never be played."

In addition to playing safe at all times in the game at hand, Moran has been a stickler for the early lead. His logic in defense of such a plan is good too. He argues that at the start of the game the players are fresh and their supply of pep is better than when the eighth or ninth inning is reached. The Reds this season have won a reputation for tearing into things in the first inning, and when they have succeeded in getting a lead they have had the incentive for hard work all the way through the game. Certainly nothing complicated about such a system—but it has gotten results.

CHAPTER XIII
HIGH MORALITY

But her ladyship's cures were not over for the day. At the door of her suite—on the other side of the house from the royal apartments occupied by Alexander!—she found a small delegation awaiting her. There was Pelton, Tommy, James, Jane, the cook and others, including even the vivacious Jacques. Nervousness or embarrassment, mixed with determination, was reflected on their faces. The lady glanced at them all casually.

"Come to say good night? So good of you, I am sure." "We aren't come exactly for that, your ladyship," said the embarrassed Pelton.

"No," Vivaciously. "No," Peinfully. "Go out!" said the voice of Jane, as Pelton hesitated and swallowed.

"Don't be hurrin' of him!" said Tommy. "Him acts as if him was afraid!"

From Jane. "What of?" From her ladyship. "I hope you haven't been doing anything you shouldn't, Pelton!" "H'm!" stammered Pelton. "H'm! I ain't me!"

"The truth is, your ladyship, we've had a meeting."

"What?" "All your ladyship's 'elpi! That is, I ain't except Bobby MacDuff, the style-man, who, being a hater, said as 'ow it wasn't any of 'is business."

"What?" "I ain't English morality!" "E do say as 'ow bishops is humbug!" From Jane, horrified.

"And it is to complain of MacDuff, that you come to interview me? I have nothing to do with his private opinions. And he has a perfect right to his opinions of bishops."

"H'm! We wasn't to complain of 'im that we are 'ere," said Pelton.

"Well?" "Go on!" From Jane, Pelton seemed to find difficulty in doing so.

"You have come to complain of some one?" said her ladyship. "We've!" Weakly.

"Well?" "What you said down there, urged Tommy. "Where we had the meeting?"

"I spoke up then, all right enough!" From Jane. "So loud and 'ighly respectable!" It was like preaching.

"Yes, Pelton, say what you said down there," said her ladyship, with a sweet smile. "You all assembled, and—"

"Well?"

"Ah, me," sighed the successful man who was visiting the old village school, "how time does fly."

"Er, a receding there, like one of those 'orrid h'mmoral French l'ydies, a-waiting for their lovers!"

"I ain't a-waiting for a lover!" exclaimed Cook indignantly.

"When you breakfast a la française, you must recline a la française," interposed her ladyship gently.

"You have the wrong idea, Jane, quite!"

"Well, er, don't look respectable reclining there like that! I ain't criticizing your ladyship's doing it—far from me! But er's too big."

"Merely a charming embonpoint!" said her ladyship.

"Well, if it breaks down, don't be blyming tag!"

"Now, leave the things!" "And now, leave the things!"

"I ain't saying I'll continue to wait on 'er, your ladyship," observed Jane, briskly, once more.

"Er whose father was a butcher and er mother poached fish! And not from a shop!"

"Don't you be aspergin the character of my mother!" cried Cook, a note of belligerence in her voice.

"With my own eyes I seen 'er!"

You Can't Cure Rheumatism With Liniments and Lotions

If you are afflicted with Rheumatism, why waste time with liniments, lotions and other local applications that never did cure Rheumatism, and never will!

Do not try to rub the pain away, for you never will succeed. Try the sensible plan of finding the cause of the pain. Remove the cause, and there can be no pain. You will never be rid of Rheumatism until you cleanse your blood of the germs that cause the disease.

S. S. S. has no equal as a blood cleanser, scores of sufferers say that it has cleansed their blood of Rheumatism, and removed all trace of the disease from their system.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. at your drug store and get on the right treatment to-day. If you want special medical advice, address Medical Director, 49 Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga.

Hazelton's Stories by Famous Duck Hunters of America

COMPILED BY W. C. HAZELTON.

BY PAUL E. PAGE 2, 1912.
Eagle George, Wash., Sept. 2, 1912. I saw the grandest duck of all black bear a few days ago. He was on a side hill in a burr eating blackberries when I first spotted him. He stalked him and got within 50 feet of him and watched him for half an hour from behind a stump.

I tried to start a chinaman with him, but he was not in a talking mood and bit it after giving me a deliberate once over.

He was a whale of a bear for a black and evidently very old. His pet looked to be in prime condition, something unusual for the time of the year.

My Deer Family
I have an addition of two fawn to my deer family. One I am raising with the doe and the other is running with the doe. I have ten head now.

I turned one buck and a doe loose in the spring and they have been hanging around my place all summer.

I was on the tip top of a mountain two miles from my home, not long ago, and ran into the tracks of two grown deer and fawn. I commenced calling "Barney," the buck's name I had turned loose, and in a short time he came up the mountain with his fawn on high tongue out a foot, froth flying and about winded.

He must have come a long distance probably near home, when he heard me call. He was with me the rest of the day and came home with me at dark.

Experience With Jacksnipe
During my career as a hunter, which now covers more than fifty years, I have had some unusual experiences with the Wilson snipe, generally calling the jacksnipe. I shall now be pleased to relate some of them to your readers.

A number of years ago I was duck shooting on a grass lake in South Dakota. I came to shore at noon for the purpose of lunch and a supply of shells for the afternoon shooting.

The farmer's son met me on my way back. He helped me with my string of ducks and we started for the house.

Cattle had grazed around the lake and eaten down the rank growth of grass and left the greater part of the shore an ideal jacksnipe ground. There were a great many of the birds around. One flew up from under my feet and I shot it, much to the surprise of my boy companion. He asked, with some curiosity, if I liked to shoot those little birds. I replied that I did, and considered them the finest table bird that flew. He replied that he could take me to a place where I could get it at a shot. I asked him where this place was and he replied in the barnyard. I told him that the birds in the barnyard were plover and killdeer, but he was most emphatic that they were jacksnipe.

We had to pass the barn in going to the house. He told me to wait a moment, and went into the barn. He came out in a moment and motioned me to come. I went in and he took me to a small door used for throwing out manure, and told me to look.

The barnyard was about an acre in extent, fenced with a wire fence.

It was covered with well packed and pulverized manure. There had been a soaking rain a few days before, followed by bright, hot sunshine. The entire barnyard was a steaming mass of rotting manure. Every such of the ground was covered with jacksnipe. They were walking over one another in their efforts to find a place where they could plunge their bills into the manure. As near as I could see they were sucking something from the manure. At any rate, as soon as a bird got his bill up to his eyes into the manure, his troubles were over, and he staid there unless some other bird crowded him out.

The boy was right. With my heavy 10-bore loaded with 2 ounces of No. 10 shot I question whether one shot into this mass of wriggling, squirming birds would have resulted in so small a number as 100.

After lunch I went out and shot several of the birds to learn on what they were feeding. I found them empty. There was not a bug or worm in their stomachs.

Strange Story of Jacksnipe
A companion and I were driving to a duck lake in South Dakota for a few days' shoot.

On our way we had to pass an artesian well that wasted into a small marsh lying between higher land on both sides. This marsh was a splendid place for mallards and we decided to stop and give them a try.

While getting out our shells and guns we noticed a large flock of grouse fly from the hills beyond us and alight in a corn field on our side of the valley. My companion decided he would try the grouse while I went into the marsh after the mallards. I went into the marsh to a spot I knew and found it deserted. Not a duck of any kind around.

My companion was busy with the grouse and shot a number of times in fact, so many times that I wondered what he could be shooting at. There were no more than two dozen grouse in the bush, and he was shooting about as fast as he could put shells into his gun.

When I reached the wagon he came to the edge of the corn field and told me to come up and bring my snipe shells and some for him. I climbed the hill to the corn field, and joined him.

It had been a dry, hot season with many hot winds and the corn crop in that part of the state had been pretty well burned up. This field was of about 30 acres and the corn had been burned up when it was high. It stood, dry and burned up, on perfectly clear ground. Not a weed had grown and the ground was as dry as an ash pile. Every step raised a cloud of dust.

There was a jacksnipe, his wife, family and a cousin or two for every corn stalk. They got in bunches of thousands. The air was full of them and they did not propose to be driven out of the field.

It was the first and only time I ever saw them fly in regular formation. They went bunch, up and straighten out into a compact flock with a formation as regular as ducks. Again they would wheel, dart and sweep like a flock of snipe. These birds were empty, and I have often wondered what they were doing in this dry, burned up corn field.

Experience in North Dakota With Wilson Snipe

I was shooting prairie chicken in North Dakota a number of years ago and in driving over the prairie we drove through what is called a lake-belt. These lake-belts are low places in the prairie that fill with water in the spring and dry out during the summer. They grow bull rushes and coarse grass in the center and finer grass on the edges. This fine grass is cut and used for hay and at that time was the principle source of supply for the farmers in that section.

The lake-belts were not in line with the prairie but were headed for and as the bottoms of such lakes were solid we drove through it rather than go around it. The grass had been cut all around the lake but a late rain had filled the center with water and the grass was still standing. As we drove in, the water was about up to the hubs of the wagon. Jacksnipe flew out in swarms. They were standing on the grass. There was no foot of ground for them to alight on as the whole lake was two feet under water.

We hitched our team to a haystack, waded into the water and began to shoot these birds flushing off from the grass. We could have had a splendid shoot had we been able to find the down birds. Our bird dogs proved useless on account of too many snipe and soon became bewildered and gave up trying. It they started to retrieve a dead bird a hundred or more would fly up from under their noses and they would never get the dead one.

These birds were empty. What were they doing clinging to this grass growing in two feet of water and why?

Snipe Come From Unseen Place
A shooting companion once told me that while duck shooting a bunch of jacksnipe came from nowhere at high noon and lit on a mud bank in front of his blind. This bank was of several acres in extent and the snipe kept coming until they covered the bank. They looked to be very tired. They came from above, straight down, and from a height where he was unable to see them.

It is possible the snipe I found in the corn field and in the lake-belt were resting, but why rest in a dry corn field or on a grass stalk when there was plenty of snipe ground all around?

The snipe on the manure were not resting, but were feeding, but on what?

Going Duck Hunting with a Rifle
I have a bad attack of the Alberta fever and think I will pull out for there about September 30th. Better arrange to meet me at Edmonton sometime in October for a few days on the stubble with the greenheads.

I would like to watch you and Clyde Peters in the swamp of those mallards when there are a dozen birds within 30 yards all of the time for two or three hours if not for the entire day.

I am going to confine myself to the 22 automatic this year, if I am lucky enough to get in on the flight. I won't get many birds, but I sure will scatter the landscape with lead. One big mallard pulled down with a 22 gives a thrill that is second to none that I know of, unless it is a big hooker.

Some Popular Fall Styles in Hats for the School and College Miss

By ETOISE.
This group of hats looks as if each one was especially designed for some dapper or college maid. At the upper right is a popular drooping brimmed sailor shape with the still more popular tam effect forming the lower right, mole colored suede, and crown. Brown velvet forms the brim, and tan velvet the crown. A chenille fringe drooping over the brim gives a softening effect. The small brown velvet hat at the upper left is used to make the little straight-brimmed little hat at the lower left a distinctly smart suit hat for the

WHO'S WHO in the Day's News

ONE of the acknowledged experts on constitutional law in the senate was born before the days of correspondence schools, so he had to teach himself. Albert Bacon Fall went to the country schools in Kentucky when he could, but that was not often enough for him, wherefore he took it upon himself to teach himself. Almost any senator who has ever entered into debate with Senator Fall will tell you that he did a pretty thorough job when he started to teach himself. He did it so well that he was a country school teacher when he was eighteen and read law after he had sent the boys and girls home for the day.

Before he became established as a lawyer, Mr. Fall worked on a farm, was a hired man on a cattle ranch and a miner. He specialized in Mexican law and went to New Mexico. Now, besides being admitted an expert on constitutional law and a United States senator, he is an extensive owner of farm land and mines in the southwest.

Senator Fall has been in the upper house of congress since 1912. Before that he had served as a member of the New Mexico legislature, was associate justice of the supreme court of New Mexico, was twice attorney general of New Mexico Territory, and served as a member of the convention which drafted New Mexico's constitution when it became a state.

Senator Fall is a Republican, has been married since 1883, and will celebrate his fifty-eighth birthday on November 26 next.

older school girl. An elephant's head makes a distinctive hat pin and is used to cover the fastening of the wing. The hat at the lower left is suitable for the youngest flapper as well as the older girl. It is quiet and unassuming, but none the less effective. Soft black velvet trimmed with rich blue velvet and silver brocade is the combination.

GIRL WINS VALOR MEDAL
London.—Miss Elizabeth Bowry, of Surrey, has been awarded a medal of valor for diving fully dressed into one of the lakes at Kew Gardens and rescuing a drowning boy. The boy had gone down for the third time when the girl reached him and swam with him to the shore where he was revived.
